Two New National Masters

Eric Rosen, of suburban Chicago, has just begun tenth grade, while Abby Marshall in Virginia is now in her senior year of high school. They both share a special accomplishment that they earned in the same place at nearly the same time – they are among America’s newest chess masters.

Everyman Quiz of the Month

Each month Everyman Chess sponsors our Everyman Quiz of the Month, offering a free chess book to three respondents with correct answers. This month, winners of our quiz will receive Starting Out: The Sicilian Dragon, by IM Andrew Martin.

We will accept all contest answers for two weeks following the appearance of this column, then randomly select our three winners from this group. In order to meet the two-week deadline, please e-mail your responses to me by September 23, 2009. Send your answers to scholasticchess@chesscafe.com. Good luck!

Problem #1

It is White to move. What do you suggest?

Problem #2

It is White to move. How can he make progress?

Eric Rosen

It was quite an incredible summer for both Eric Rosen from Illinois and Abby Marshall from Virginia. As summer began, both of these high school students were rated Experts, and as summer draws to a close, they are now both National Masters.

As noted in this column last month, Eric Rosen took first place in the 2009 U.S. Junior Open, after winning an exciting blitz playoff game. Following that tournament, his rating stood at 2184. Less than a month later, he played in the U.S. Open, giving him an opportunity to top the magical 2200 mark.

His first two rounds were against lower-rated players, both of whom he defeated. Round three, however, found him with the black pieces paired against the 2584-rated GM Jesse Kraai. Reaching an endgame with a lone rook against the grandmaster’s rook and pawn, Rosen was able to successfully navigate the resultant Philidor Position and hold the draw. Kraai didn’t let him off easy, however, playing the game out until stalemate. Here is that game:

Kraai,Jesse - Rosen,Eric

Open Catalan [E05]

1.Nf3 d5 2.d4 Nf6 3.c4 e6 4.g3 Be7 5.Bg2 0–0 6.0–0 dxc4 7.Qc2 a6 8.a4 Bd7 9.Qxc4 Bc6 10.Bf4 Nd5 11.Nc3 Nxf4 12.gxf4 Bd6 13.e3 Nd7 14.Kh1 Nf6 15.Rg1 Ne4 16.Nxe4 Bxe4 17.Ng5 Bxg2+ 18.Rxg2 Be7 19.Rag1 Bxg5 20.Rxg5 g6 21.Rc1 c6 22.a5 Qe7 23.Qc5 Qxc5 24.Rgxc5 Rfd8 25.Kg2 Rd5 26.b4 Rad8 27.h4 h5 28.Kf3 Kg7 29.Ke4 Kf6 30.Kd3 Ke7 31.Kc4 Ke8 32.Rg1 Ke7 33.Rb1 Ke8 34.Rxd5 Rxd5 35.e4 Rb5 36.Rg1 Kd7 37.Rg5 Kd6 38.f3 b6 39.axb6 Rxb6 40.Ra5 Kd7 41.f5 exf5 42.exf5 Rb5 43.fxg6 fxg6 44.Rxa6 Rf5 45.Ra7+ Kd6 46.Rg7 Rf6 47.Rg8 Kc7 48.Kc5 Rf5+ 49.Kc4 Rf6 50.b5 cxb5+ 51.Kxb5 Rxf3 52.Rxg6 Rf4 53.Kc5 Rxh4 54.Rg7+ Kd8 55.Rh7 Rg4 56.Rxh5

With his next move, Eric produces the Philidor Position, a theoretically drawn position. It’s instructive to see the classic way he handles it, keeping his rook along his third rank until White pushes his pawn to its sixth rank, on move sixty-four.

56...Rg6 57.Rh8+ Kc7 58.Rh7+ Kd8 59.Ra7 Rh6 60.Rb7 Rg6 61.Rh7 Rf6 62.d5 Rg6 63.Rh5 Rf6 64.d6

Now with the white pawn on its sixth rank, it’s time to reposition the black rook.

In round four, Eric fell to IM Gergely Antal (rated 2517, and winner of the 2009 Tournament of College Champions), then defeated a 2000-rated player in the next round. For round six, he was paired with 2008 U.S. Junior Champion Tyler Hughes, rated 2376.

As the game wound down into the endgame, a wild scramble ensued, with neither player having more than a few seconds on the clock. Andrea Rosen, Eric’s mother, described the action:

“The endgame just about put me in the hospital – my poor heart has never beat so hard. When I went in to check on the game, Eric was up a pawn, but there was a lot of material still on what seemed to me a pretty closed board, and Eric was having a hard time breaking through. He was up on time by about 12 minutes to two minutes. Tyler was playing largely on the delay, safe moves back and forth, while Eric was taking his time, which eventually shrunk to Eric with about 4.5 minutes, and Tyler with only 5 seconds, with no further exchange of material. Tyler was playing strictly on the delay, and Eric’s time kept whittling down. I can’t tell you what was happening on the board, because I didn’t understand it, except a bishop and knight were exchanged but still no breakthrough. Eric kept taking his time – you could see he was struggling to figure out a way to break through. It appeared as though he lost track of his clock and was going to flag. He made a move and hit it – he had two seconds left. At that point, I thought I might collapse of a heart attack, and he’d lose the game if I did it in front of him, so I turned to walk away. I hadn’t realized it, but a large crowd had gathered around his board (it was of course the last game in the room), and I had to squeeze my way through to get out. I think they played like that for another few minutes – Eric went from being up a pawn to being down a pawn to being up two rooks to one rook and a pawn to finally having one rook to a pawn and then mate. He was of course very happy but also totally worn out. I had food waiting for him – as we walked into the skittles room to eat they were posting the pairings for the next round! He’s playing a 2287, and me, I’m taking a nap!”

Perhaps worn out by his encounter with Hughes, Rosen dropped his round seven game against a master, but then rebounded to win in round eight against a lower-rated player. This brought him to the final, ninth round.

Eric had already faced two national masters, an international master and a grandmaster, but it wasn’t getting any easier. His final round opponent was the well-known GM John Fedorowicz, rated 2531. I happened to catch the latter part of the game live on MonRoi and it was a stunner. Here’s what happened:

John Fedorowicz - Eric Rosen
US Open, Indianapolis (9), 09.08.2009
Queen’s Gambit Declined [D35]

1.d4 d5 2.c4 e6 3.Nc3 Nf6 4.cxd5 exd5 5.Bg5 c6 6.e3 Bf5 7.g4 Be6 8.h3 Nbd7 9.f4 Nb6 10.Bd3 Be7 11.Nf3 Qd6 12.f5 Qg3+ 13.Kd2 Ne4+ 14.Nxe4 dxe4 15.Bxe4 Qf2+

At this point, Fritz rates the position as even, assuming that White will next move 16.Kc1. However ...

16.Kc3?? Bb4+ 0–1

After 17.Kxb4, there would have followed 17...Qxb2+, when White has the unpleasant choices of 18.Kc5 Qa3#; 18.Ka5 Qb5#; or 18.Qb3 and White loses his queen, and shortly thereafter, his king.

When the smoke had cleared, Rosen walked away from the U.S. Open with a new rating of 2230. As his father wisely noted after his victory at the Junior Open, “At the end of the day it’s only a number, one that can be revisited on the downside as well, and Eric has aspirations in chess that go beyond simply reaching the 2200 rating level.” We will anxiously watch Eric’s progress as the tenth grade youngster’s chess career moves forward.

Abby Marshall

While Eric Rosen was surprising his opponents at the U.S. Open in Indianapolis, Abby Marshall was pulling off victory after victory at the concurrent Denker Tournament of High School Champions, in the same location.

Forty-nine players were competing in the six-round Denker, including four masters and seventeen experts. In the initial round, Abby was paired with Michael Finneran. The game appeared pretty even until Abby broke through on the queenside on move thirty-nine:

For round three, Abby faced Vincent Huang who, like Abby, stood at 2-0. Using her favorite King’s Gambit opening, the game was effectively over by move twenty-eight, although her opponent didn’t resign until some thirty moves later:

Going into the sixth and final round, Abby’s next-closest competitor was Michael Yang. Michael was only a half-point behind, with four wins and a draw. Therefore, Abby needed only a draw to nail down her hold on first place. The game, however, proved anything but easy. The fireworks started early, and Abby comments about this nail-biter:

Abby Marshall (2181) - Michael Yang (2191)

Sicilian Defense [B97]

Alright, so this last game was totally crazy. For over an hour we each had less than four minutes, with me defending and him trying to find a way to break through, terribly nerve wracking. It was a great game and finish I think; maybe the opening wasn’t so awesome for me at least but we both played really well during the last forty moves or so.

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 d6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 a6 6.Bg5 e6 7.f4 Qb6 8.Qd2 Nc6 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nb3 Bd7 11.Be2 h5 12.0–0–0 Rc8 13.Kb1 Qf2

Oh. A fire alarm went off in the middle of the game. It was much later on than this point, but anyway, we got up and started walking out of the room when it stopped beeping after about a minute. Honestly, it was a nice break, at least for me, in the tension of the game. I don’t know if it helped or hurt me anyway. Whatever.

49...Rf4 50.a4 b6 51.Re3 Rg4 52.Re1 Bh5 53.Re2 Rh4 54.Re3 Rh2 55.Re1 Bg4 56.Re3 Kf4 57.Re1 Bf3 58.Nb1 Rh7 59.Nd2 Rd7+ 60.Kc3

I must have switched to using hieroglyphics to write the last thirty moves, so unfortunately I cannot make out the entire game. I’m not sure if there is a way to break through, but I had to push the pawns my queenside pawns because at some point I will have to sacrifice my knight for the kingside passer, and having queenside pawns on the board would give him winning chances. When they are advanced, I can trade them off, which is what happened. I sacked my knight, leaving me with a rook and a pawn against a rook and a bishop. He offered me a draw and of course I accepted.

Here is the remaining game score as reported by MonRoi:

60...Bf3 61.Nb1 Rg7 62.Nd2 Rd7 63.Kc3 Bg4 64.Rf1 Kg5 65.Rf2 f5 66.exf5 exf5 67.Nc4 b5 68.axb5 axb5 69.Ne5 Rd5 70.Nd3 Kf6 71.Kb3 Rd4 72.Kc3 Rc4 73.Kd2 Kg5 74.Rg2 Re4 75.Rg1 Re2 76.Kc3 f4 77.Ra1 Be6 78.Rg1 Kf5 79.Rf1 Re4 80.Rf2 Rc4 81.Kd2 Bd5 82.Rh2 Bc6 83.Rh8 Kg5 84.Rg8 Kf6 85.Rf8 Kg5 86.Rg8 Kh5 87.Rf8 Kg5 88.Ne5 Rd4 89.Kc3 Re4 90.Nf3 Kg4 91.Nd4 Bd7 92.Rg8 Kh3 93.Rg7 Bg4 94.Kd3 Re3 95.Kd2 Re5 96.Kd3 f3 97.Nxf3 ½–½

There was strain, there was tension, it looked iffy for awhile, and it took nearly 100 moves. But in the end, Abby Marshall became the first female to win the annual Denker Tournament of High School Champions, and her rating had risen to 2241.

To top it off, Abby had the opportunity the next day to play Women’s World Champion GM Alexandra Kosteniuk in a simultaneous exhibition. Abby held her to a draw. Here’s that game:
